

The AXIOM Aesthetic

Weekly inspiration for the creative mind.

In 1962, Eon Productions released Dr. No, its first adaptation of Ian Fleming's James Bond novels. The film, about a suave, deadly, and witty secret agent uncovering a mad scientist's plot in the Caribbean, was a massive hit, and launched one of the longest-running and most successful media franchises of all time.

More than five decades later, James Bond is still going strong. Six different actors have played the legendary Agent 007 over the course of two dozen films in Eon's series, and as a result of the films' popularity Bond's life has also continued in novels, comics, and even a few non-canonical films. James Bond is a survivor, not just in pop culture but in the many cinematic stories of his adventures. Over the course of 60 years 24 films have generated more than $6.89 billion globally and on Friday the 25th film will be released stateside.
